

Shifting Control of Motherhood Session Six

THE CHALLENGE

- A mom's efforts to control usually have disastrous family consequences.
- Controlling our children may stifle God's plan for them.
- Controlling our children builds walls in the family.
- Controlling our children feeds our own self-centeredness.
- Controlling our children leads to our own disappointment.

THE SOLUTION

- Faith that God knows best, helps us shift control of our children.
- I must trust God with my children.
- I must demonstrate my faith to my children.
- I must be flexible regarding my children.
- I must have a future focus for my children.
